

INSIDE THE DIVISION I INFRACTIONS PROCESS:

Who's Who in the Infractions Process

ENFORCEMENT STAFF

Members: A department within the NCAA national office with staff who are former student-athletes, coaches, scouts, academic advisors, compliance officers, athletics administrators, attorneys and more.

What they do:

- Monitor information regarding potential violations.
- Investigate potential threats to college sports.
- Process less serious violations.
- Provide notice of alleged violations to schools and involved individuals.
- Present cases to Committee on Infractions.

COMMITTEE ON INFRACTIONS

Members: Qualified representatives from member schools, conferences and the public, including university presidents, conference commissioners, campus administrators, faculty athletics representatives, former coaches, former government officials and more.

What they do:

- Review case information from the enforcement staff, schools and involved individuals.
- Conduct hearings.
- Resolve factual disputes.
- Conclude whether violations occurred.
- Prescribe appropriate penalties.
- Issue written decisions in summary disposition and hearing track cases.
- Approve negotiated resolutions.
- Restore full membership rights at the end of probation.

OFFICE OF THE COMMITTEES ON INFRACTIONS

Members: A department within the NCAA national office with staff who support the Committee on Infractions and the administration of the infractions process.

What they do:

- Review annual compliance reports from schools on probation.
- Take substantive issues to the committee.
- Support the movement of cases through the infractions process.
- Review the case record and initiate preparatory documents for the COI.
- Coordinate with parties and legal counsel on case-related issues.
- Serve as a resource for the membership, national office staff, committees and public related to the infractions process.

INFRACTIONS APPEALS COMMITTEE

Members: Qualified representatives from member schools, conferences and the public, including university presidents, conference administrators, directors of athletics, campus administrators and faculty athletics representatives.

What they do:

- Review Committee on Infractions decisions for appealed cases.
- Generally, review appeals on the written record and, in extenuating circumstances, conduct oral arguments.
- Determine whether COI decisions should be upheld, reversed or remanded.
- Provide the final word on violations and penalties.

INFRACTIONS APPEALS COMMITTEES OFFICE

Members: A department within the NCAA national office with staff who serve as liaisons to the Infractions Appeals Committee.

What they do:

- Support the movement of cases through the infractions appeals process.
- Serve as a resource for membership, national office staff, committees and public related to the infractions appeals process.
- Facilitate the committee's review and resolution of appeals.